

Uncharged Company-Owned Mobile Devices are Hurting Employee Productivity.

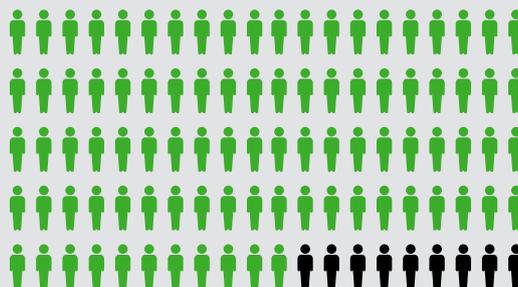

73% of organisations are failing to leverage secure charging stations.¹

Many organisations are laser-focused on improving productivity and profitability. Providing tools and resources on a mobile device is a great step towards meeting goals to streamline processes or reduce paper processes. The priority of many mobile device deployments is often centered around preparing the device itself, rather than prioritising how the devices will fit into daily workflow. Because 73% of organisations fail to leverage secure charging stations, device users are wasting valuable time looking for devices, only to find them partially charged or dead. However, 91% of current LocknCharge customers prioritise having easy access to devices as part of their mobile device initiative.¹ By adding efficient centralised, mobile or on-demand charging stations, these businesses are ensuring devices are easy to find, fully charged and ready to use at all times.
